q34_26. THE BIG CONTRACT.

VinaTex, a garment manufacturer, is negotiating a two-year supply contract with NordStyle, a Scandinavian fashion retailer. NordStyle wants 200,000 jackets a year, delivered in four batches, at a price 12% below VinaTex's usual rate. It also wants the right to cancel any batch with 30 days' notice and asks for proof that workers are paid fairly. VinaTex needs the contract: one of its biggest customers has just moved production to another country. However, the company's managers believe a 12% discount would leave almost no profit. They are prepared to offer a lower price only if NordStyle increases the order, pays 30% in advance or accepts later delivery dates. Both teams will meet next week in Ho Chi Minh City.

QUESTION: What annual order quantity does NordStyle initially request?

a. 200,000 jackets over two years
b. 50,000 jackets per year
c. 200,000 jackets per year
d. 400,000 jackets per batch
